Medicine, Health, and Bioethics: Essential Primary Sources is the product of a truly global, multi-lingual group of scholars, researchers, and writers. Despite the span of writers and researchers, the book suffered local delays and disruptions related to Hurricanes Ivan and Katrina while the editors worked and covered stories along the U.S. Gulf Coast. In the aftermath, the sure and steady efforts of the primary copyeditors, Christine Jeryan and Amy Leorch Strumolo, not only added significant accuracy and readability to the text, their efforts also helped to piece back together fragments of texts and sources scattered in both physical and cyberspace.

The editors also wish to commend Adrienne Wilmoth Lerner and Alicia Maria Cafferty for their tireless research skills and effort. The keen eyes and sound judgments of the copyeditors and primary researchers greatly enhanced the quality and readability of the text.

The editors are grateful for the assistance of Thomas Willam, AHIP, Professor and Director, Biomedical Libraries, University of South Alabama, and his kind and knowledgeable staff.

The editors gratefully acknowledge and extend thanks to Peter Gareffa, Carol Nagel, and Debra Kirby at Thomson Gale for their faith in the project and for their sound content advice. Lastly, but perhaps most importantly to a book containing primary source materials, without the tenacious efforts of Project Manager Melissa Hill and the Thomson Gale copyright research staff, quite literally right up to publication deadlines, this book would not have been possible. The editors also wish to acknowledge the contributions of the Thomson Gale Imaging Team, and Marcia Schiff at the Associated Press for their help in securing archival images.
