Contributors

Bert Almon. Poet, critic, and biographer, Bert Almon teaches English at the University of Alberta. He is the author of William Humphrey: Destroyer of Myths (North Texas State University Press, 1998), This Stubborn Self: Texas Autobiographies (TCU Press, 2001), and eight collections of poetry. He has published articles on American, English, Canadian, and Australian writers. JONATHAN LETHEM

Ian Bickford. Ian Bickford is a visiting assistant professor of English at Bard College at Simon’s Rock and a student in the Ph.D. program in English at the City University of New York Graduate Center, where he is writing a dissertation titled “The Thief of Paradise: John Milton and Seventh-day Adventism.” His poetry and other writings have appeared in Agni, JST, Post Road, Beloit Poetry Review, Colorado Review, Sleeping Fish, Smartish Pace, Asheville Poetry Review, Oxford Encyclopedia of American Literature, and elsewhere. He has been the recipient of a Mayers fellowship at the Huntington Library. He lives in Pownal, Vermont. BOB DYLAN

Kim Bridgford. Kim Bridgford is a professor of English at Fairfield University and editor of Dogwood and Mezzo Cammin. Her books include Undone, nominated for the Pulitzer Prize; and In the Extreme: Sonnets about World Records, winner of the Donald Justice Prize. In addition, she has written on such poets as Sharon Olds, Dana Gioia, Mark Jarman, Brigit Pegeen Kelly, Mark Doty, and Micheal O’Siadhail. She is currently working on a three-book poetry/photography project with visual artist Jo Yarrington, focusing on journey and sacred space in Iceland, Venezuela, and Bhutan. MARLENN NELSON

Susan Butterworth. Susan Butterworth is a professor of English at Salem State College, where she teaches courses in literature, research, and writing. She has written reference articles for such volumes as the Oxford Encyclopedia of American Literature, American Writers, British Writers, Meynell’s Survey of World Literature, Musicians and Composers of the Twentieth Century, Critical Survey of Mystery and Detective Fiction, among many others. She also writes and publishes creative nonfiction, travel and memoir writing, and literary biography. JON KRAKAUER

Deborah Kay Ferrell. Deborah Kay Ferrell earned a doctorate in creative writing and American literature from Florida State University. She has been the recipient of a Florida Arts Council grant for her fiction. Currently, she is an associate professor of English at SUNY–Finger Lakes Community College, where she teaches courses in writing, cinema, and American literature. She recently completed a novel on her experiences with the Cuban-American community in Miami. HA JIN

William L. Frank. William L. Frank is a professor emeritus and former dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Longwood College. Before teaching at Longwood, he served for four years in the U.S. Air Force and taught at the University of Southern Mississippi, Northwestern University, Delta State University, and the University of Southeast Missouri. He has published books and articles on Sherwood Bonner, William Hoffman, Robert Penn Warren, and Allen Wier. He resides in Rice, Virginia, with his wife. They have three children and eight grandchildren. William Hoffman

Angela Garcia. Angela Garcia earned a master’s degree in English from the University of California, Davis. She has taught in El Salvador, as well as California schools. Having recently moved to Corvallis, Oregon, she is employed as a freelance online writer, as well as a professional scorer for Pearson and the Educational Testing Service. Margaret Edison

Tracie Church Guzzio. Tracie Church Guzzio is an associate professor of English at the State University of New York at Plattsburgh, where she teaches courses in African American literature, literary theory, and human rights literature. She has published criticism on various African American writers and was co-editor of The Encyclopedia of African-American Literature. She recently completed a manuscript on the work of John Edgar Wideman, and she is currently working on a study of post-traumatic narratIVES and African American literature. Percival Everett

Joan Wylie Hall. Joan Wylie Hall teaches Southern literature and other American literary genres at the University of Mississippi. Author of Shirley Jackson: A Study of the Short Fiction and editor of the interview collection Conversations with Audre Lorde, she has published essays on Willa Cather, William Faulkner, Josephine Humphreys, Anna Deavere Smith, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Eudora Welty, Tennessee Williams, among others. She contributed the Ann Patchett essay to American Writers Supplement XII. Janisse Ray

Paul Johnston. Paul Johnston is an associate professor of English at the State University of New York at Plattsburgh, where he teaches courses in colonial and nineteenth-century American literature, as well as nature writing courses. He has published articles on Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and the Fireside Poets, Susan and James Fenimore Cooper, Jonathan Edwards, Thomas Merton, and Barry Lopez. He is currently writing a study of Catholicism in nineteenth-century American literature. Alice McDermott

Laurie Ousley. Laurie Ousley is a faculty member at the Nichols School. She has published a collection of essays about children’s literature titled To See the Wizard: Politics and the Literature of Childhood, which includes her essay “‘Well-read people are less likely to be evil’: Intellectual Development and Justice in Lemony Snicket’s A Series of Unfortunate Events.” She has also published in Legacy and has an essay forthcoming in Mother Knows Best: Talking Back to the “Experts.” She is currently working on a study of political intentions within young readers’ literature from the nineteenth century to the present-day. Susan Warner

Joseph G. Ramsey. Joseph G. Ramsey is an assistant professor of English at Fisher College and a recent graduate of Tufts University’s Ph.D. program in English. His current research focuses on U.S. proletarian literature and the intersections between left-wing movements and twentieth-century U.S. mass culture. Along with Graham Barnfield and Victor Cohen, Ramsey co-edited a special issue of the e-journal Reconstruction focusing on the theme of “class, culture, and public intellectuals.” Work from his dissertation “Red Pulp: Radicalism and Repression in Mid-20th Century U.S. ‘Genre’ Fiction” is forthcoming in Mediations and Reconstruction 8.4, while his film criticism has appeared in such journals as Cultural Logic, Socialism and Democracy, and Counterpunch. Paul William Ryan

Whitney Womack Smith. Whitney Womack Smith is an associate professor of English and Contributors / xiii

an affiliate in women's studies and black world studies at Miami University Hamilton. Her research focuses on the transatlantic relationships and dialogues among nineteenth-century British and American women writers. She has published articles and biographical entries on Harriet Beecher Stowe, Rebecca Harding Davis, Elizabeth Gaskell, Elizabeth Siddal, and Margaret Sackville. NELLA LARSEN, DOROTHY WEST

Richard Wakefield. Richard Wakefield has taught composition and American literature at Tacoma Community and the University of Washington for over twenty-five years. He has also been a literary critic for the Seattle Times for over twenty years. His collection of poetry, East of Early Winters, was published by the University of Evansville Press and received the Richard Wilbur Award. ROBERT WREXLEY

Bette S. Weidman. Bette S. Weidman is an associate professor of English at Queens College of the City University of New York, where she has been teaching American literature since 1968. She also serves as director of American studies at Queens College and held a Fulbright fellowship in India in 1997. She has written on Charles Frederick Briggs, Henry David Thoreau, Herman Melville, Margaret Fuller and other antebellum authors, as well as on Native American literature and historic photographs. CHARLES FREDERICK BRIGGS