The Ancient Near East: An Encyclopedia for Students

Ronald Wallenfels, Editor in Chief

This 4-vol. set was especially written and designed for students. Modeled after the award-winning Ancient Greece and Rome and The Middle Ages, with material selected and modified from the Dartmouth Medal-winning Civilizations of the Ancient Near East, this encyclopedia supports thematic teaching in world history and social studies and rounds out any ancient civilizations library collection.

Spanning more than 4,000 years, from the Early Bronze Age to 325 B.C., The Ancient Near East provides an appealing overview of the very beginnings of human history. Ancient Egyptian, Sumerian, Anatolian, Assyrian, Canaanite/Israelite and Persian civilizations are explored as well as other peoples of the region. Rulers, religions, myths, literature, arts, environment, commerce, daily life, burial practices and numerous other aspects of society are brought forth in more than 400 articles that range in length from 300 to 2,500 words.

Features:

- Fully illustrated with maps, drawings, and full-color inserts in each volume
- 2-color format includes visual aids such as timelines, sidebars, and subheads for ease of use
- 420 A-to-Z articles on history, culture, art, customs and more
- Includes a general introduction, chronology and full index

Appropriate for high school, junior college and public libraries

- Junior and senior high school students researching topics in history, social studies, geography, mythology, religion, and other curriculum areas will find the set easy to use
- Junior college students will find articles supporting studies in anthropology, history, religious studies, social science, the arts and more
