

Do justice to your studies at the law library

While the world of legal information is changing rapidly, the practical techniques and strategies for conducting successful and effective law research haven't. Your law library, because of its depth of resources and ability to retrieve documents quickly, is unsurpassed when it comes to exposure to, and content of, American and International legal information.

As a law student, and later as an attorney, you will be expected and required to perform the most complete research in the shortest, most efficient manner. By taking advantage of your law library and the extraordinary services offered — including an array of comprehensive and current materials, as well as the knowledgeable and valuable assistance of a personal legal research consultant, (a.k.a. the law librarian!) — you can be confident that the garnered results will help you achieve, even exceed, the goals of the law school's curriculum.

Do justice to your studies and gain a competitive advantage. Visit your law library, where you'll discover traditional print resources, as well as expanding electronic sources and research technologies.
